CAMBRIDGE UFO RESEARCH GROUP

NEWSLETTER - SEPTEMBER, 1994

I would like to announce that this will be the last UFO newsletter that I will put out.

After long and thoughtful deliberation, I feel I do not wish to have the responsibility of putting out a massive newsletter, running monthly meetings, and all the other work involved in running a group, any longer.

I started the group in September, 1976, and have produced the newsletter since that time.

I need a break after this long period. I still definitely have the interest, but I do not wish to have all the time consuming work and responsibilities.

I wish all those still involved in the relentless research and work, all the best.

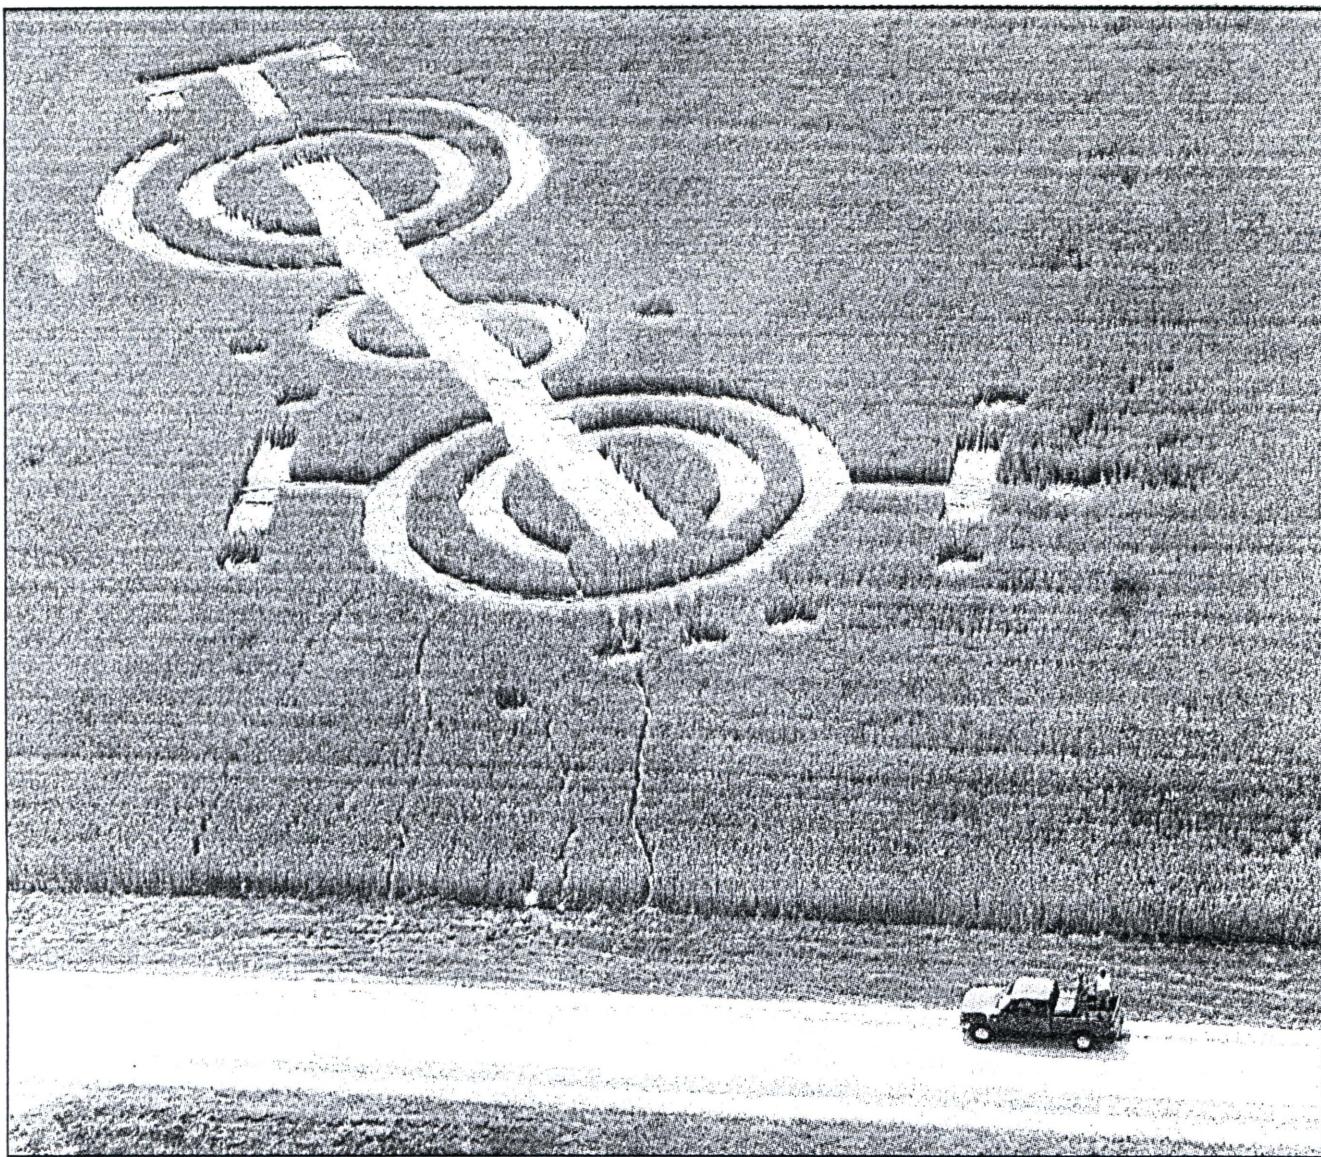

Me, I shall take a sabbatical.

Sincerely,

Bonnie Wheeler

THIS BIZARRE pattern in a Malden Township wheat field has people shaking their heads. The trails in the photo were made by onlookers Thursday afternoon.

Wheat field pattern a real puzzler

By Blair Crawford/Star County Reporter

MALDEN CENTRE - Pranksters or aliens? You be the judge.

A bizarre pattern in a Malden Township wheat field has more than a few veteran farmers scratching their heads in puzzlement.

The strange symbol appeared in a 20-hectare field farmed by the brothers Darwin and Gerry Wismer sometime in the past week and was noticed by neighbor Jon Parks as he passed by Tuesday.

"I COULD SEE THE wheat was down so I stopped to take a look. That's when I saw it was pushed down cleanly," Parks said.

Parks drove on and later called The Star to report the phenomenon. By Thursday afternoon a crowd of perplexed locals had gathered at the site on Con. 7 south of Highway 18.

The Parks and Wismers surveyed the site that afternoon. "I've never seen anything like it," said Parks, who has farmed in Malden Township since 1974. "If someone did this, they went to an awful lot of trouble."

When local businessman Barry Purdie arrived with his 30-metre boom truck for an aerial view, things really got interesting. From the air the perfect symmetry of the figure became eerily apparent.

"IT'S HARD TO believe that this was done by people," said Matt Parlette, who took a Polaroid camera aloft for a bird's eye view.

"You see this sort of stuff on TV but you never expect to see it around here. Maybe we shouldn't be walking around here. What if we start glowing in the dark," Parlette joked.

The Wismers toured the site briefly, shrugged, and declined to comment. Then they set off to get their combine. This was one crop circle that would have a short life span.

"Looks like we've lost a few bushels of wheat," said one as he cracked some kernels and popped them into his mouth.

The symbol was granted a reprieve a short time later when a moisture test showed the wheat was still too wet to harvest. The brothers hope to finish the combining in a few days if the weather holds.

FROM THE GROUND it is difficult to tell how the wheat was flattened. There was no evidence of a trail leading to the scene from a nearby concession road, no evidence of any vehicle or mechanical device, and no obvious footprints in the dry, hard soil.

The figure is based on a central corridor, 2.5 metres wide and about 50 metres long. At each end are concentric circles, the largest about 15 metres in diameter. Several T-shaped figures are attached to the main figure and several more circular marks about two metres in diameter have been formed alongside.

Wheat field tale takes on life of its own

By David Morelli
Star County Reporter

MALDEN CENTRE — Maybe the aliens who created the strange wheat field circles also tinkered with people's brains before leaving.

A front page article in this week's Amherstburg Echo newspaper describes the story of a nearby resident who said "government officials" came to his home and confiscated a video tape and pictures he took of the unexplained crop formations.

Like a script from an Oliver Stone conspiracy movie, the "official looking" officials didn't identify themselves, but demanded that Barry Purdie give them the goods.

Well, Barry Purdie told The Star he never said that, and complained the newspaper article is making a mockery of what possibly is an unearthly phenomenon.

The Echo reporter who wrote the story begs to differ: Purdie told him the story not once, but twice, the first time face to face.

"It was Mr. Purdie all right," said Jack Kindred. "He volunteered the information to me."

This latest story continues the fascination with the wheat crop thinings, which appeared about two weeks ago. For those living in outer space for the past few years (maybe you can explain them then), mysterious circular and geometric shapes have been discovered carved out in farm fields in Britain and the United States, some bigger than football fields.

EXPLANATIONS RANGE from mischievous kids with big sticks to our friends in outer space.

No one has figured out what happened in Malden Centre. The field has since been harvested, as farmers sought to discourage the dozens of curiosity seekers who flocked to the site.

The Paramount Studio television show Sightings, which chronicles suspected UFO encounters, has been calling local yodels, including The Star and Purdie, looking for a story.

Purdie owns a nearby general contracting firm in Malden Centre, and had been hoisting people up in his 25-metre crane for a better view of the crop formations.

He maintains he never was accosted by "government officials," despite the Echo story quoting him

THESE FIGURES found in Malden field have stirred controversy saying so.

"I'm not giving up something to some guys I don't know. It's put a dark spot on the circles. It's making it into a prank."

Purdie said he's the victim of rumors, such as he was the creator of the circles using his crane. He got a call last week from someone identifying himself as a University of Saskatchewan student who wanted to make bread out of any wheat Purdie had saved.

Kindred stands by his story as told to him by Purdie. Skeptical at first after speaking with Purdie at the Malden Township community picnic, Kindred called him back three days later and got the same story. "I wanted to make sure it wasn't beer talking," Kindred said. "He said he was ordered not to talk to anyone about it."

Despite his denials, Purdie said he wouldn't ask for a retraction from the newspaper.

"I'd just as soon let this whole thing die."

Wheat field

When Acting Sgt. Bob Wollison of the Malden OPP arrived, his first concern was for the wheat trampled by onlookers visiting the site.

"Farmers don't like people knocking down their crops," he said.

But after an inspection of the site Wollison was as perplexed as anyone else. He leans towards the mischievous teenagers theory.

"Now that Boblo Island (amusement park) is closed there's an awful lot of kids around with nothing to do," he said.

In the past 15 years similar crop circles have been found in more than 20 countries, including Canada. The most famous crop circles were found in England and spawned an industry of speculative books, citing everything from freak wind storms to alien spacecraft for the circles.

The most famous researcher of the English crop circles, a retired engineer, admitted in 1991 that he had been duped by a pair of pranksters who made the circles using a plank to flatten the wheat, guided by a length of chain attached to a pivot point in the centre of the circles.

The circles have even formed the basis for an advertising campaign, which claims the circles were formed by giant peanut butter cups.

But there are those who still say the mysterious figures are beyond explanation.

"It's good to maintain a skepticism, but it's important to document these circles," said Bob Whitney, an amateur astronomer from Detroit who closely follows the crop circle story.

"I don't rule out the possibility of extra-terrestrials, but I don't immediately jump to that conclusion. Many of these are pranks, but experts can usually tell immediately which are hoaxes and which deserve more study."

Whitney, who hasn't seen the local site, said samples of the soil and the damaged wheat should be taken for laboratory analysis.

"In the lab they can tell whether there was any microwave energy involved," he said in a telephone interview.

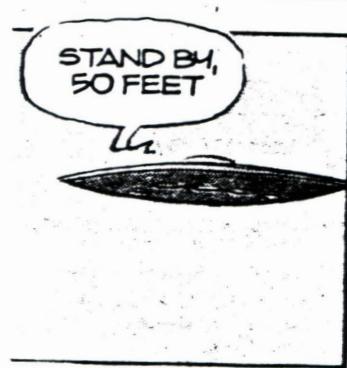

The Malden Township figure comes just a few weeks after a mysterious crop circle appeared in a wheatfield besides a highway near Portland, Ore. Hundreds of gawkers have flocked to the Oregon crop circles, keeping the local sheriff's department busy controlling traffic.

Unlike the Oregon crop circles, which was formed on a shallow rise and clearly visible from the roadway, the Malden Township forms are barely noticeable except from the air. And had it not been for Jon Parks' keen eye, the figures could have disappeared beneath a combine without ever being seen.

Ongoing Abductions

Leah Haley

A recent independent survey conducted by the Roper Organization<sup>1</sup> reported that possibly two percent of the American adult population has had an alien abduction experience.<sup>2</sup> These experiences often begin in childhood but are blocked from the abductee's conscious memory. They lie dormant in his subconscious mind until years later when an event or a phrase triggers his memory. That's what happened to me.

During the summer of 1990, I was leading a relatively normal life. I had a rewarding job as an accounting instructor at a small Southern university while I worked on my Master's degree in Business Administration. Happily married with two wonderful teenage daughters, I was quite content with my community activities and membership in the First Baptist Church. Sometimes, however, juggling so many responsibilities was stressful.

One weekend I went to visit my parents, welcoming the break from my hectic routine. Something my mother said triggered my memory of a childhood UFO sighting that occurred in a small Alabama town in the early 1960's. I remembered how my brother, a friend, and I watched a silver, spherical object sit stationary in the blue afternoon sky until it appeared to float down gently into the woods nearby. I remembered how we searched the woods for this strange object and came back out disappointed that we hadn't found it.

My brother showed up at my parents' home soon after I recalled this incident, and as we discussed it, something he said triggered yet another memory. I remembered being aboard a spaceship as a young adult, undergoing a medical examination by chalky-colored alien beings with huge slanted black eyes. The entities had two little holes where their nose should have been, no hair, no ears and no discernible mouth or clothing. I remembered feeling calm and sedated in the brightly lit, round room. And I remembered the next morning convincing myself that an incident such as this could not possibly be real and, therefore, had to have been a dream.

Soon after this conversation at my parents' home, I began having flashbacks of huge black eyes staring at me. I found myself drawing heads of the chalky-colored creatures when I should have been taking notes in my graduate classes. I began to notice cars following me and lean, short-haired men watching me. One morning I found myself floating above my bed in a band of bright white light, wondering how to get back into bed so I could get up and go to work. Suddenly I felt my head hit the pillow. These strange things were beginning to be more than I could take.

In desperation, I decided to undergo hypnotic regression to determine if I was crazy, if my memory of an alien abduction was merely a dream, or if I had really been abducted by the small alien creatures. I sought the help of John Carpenter, currently Director of Abduction Research for the Mutual UFO Network. In March, 1991, John performed my first two hypnotic regressions.

In the first session, I remembered additional details about my childhood UFO sighting: When we looked for the craft in the woods, we split up to cover more territory. Next to a large tree, I saw one of the scary-looking, chalky-colored creatures. He led me to a clearing in the woods where a bright light engulfed us. Next I found myself lying on a platform in a brightly lit round room where identical-looking creatures stood around me. I noticed their long, skinny arms and slender hands with only four fingers. I remembered them poking my arms, legs, and feet with a long, silver instrument.

In the second session, I discovered that the memory of floating above my bed in white light was part of an abduction experience. I also remembered additional details about the encounter I had previously called a dream: I woke up thirsty during the night and went to the kitchen to get a drink of water. Once there, for some unknown reason, I felt compelled to open the door and go outside.

Hovering in the air of our back yard was a round spaceship. A beam of light engulfed me and took me aboard. Several chalky-colored creatures performed gynecological-type procedures on me. Then they did something to my right ear that caused a painful piercing sensation. Another creature on the far side of the room performed lab experiments.

Recalling these additional details in the hypnotic regressions suggested that my memories were of real abduction experiences rather than dreams, and John could find nothing to indicate a mental illness. Still, I did not want to accept the reality of the abduction phenomenon. I preferred to believe there was something wrong with my mind because I felt there was a chance of curing a mental problem.

The first day back at work after my first two regressions, I caught a man snooping around the passenger window of my locked car. I traced his license plate number and, after further investigation, discovered he worked in a metrology lab for a company that calibrates equipment on the space shuttles' external tanks for NASA.

A few days after this incident, my husband reported that the FBI had been at his place of employment asking questions about him. The next month an Air Force Captain whom I didn't know tried to lure me to an Air Force Base where armed guards were authorized to use deadly force. This sudden unexplained interest by apparent military and government agents terrified me but forced me into accepting the reality of my abduction experiences.

In the meantime, I experienced additional abductions and was able to remember parts of them consciously. For example, on the evening of March 31, 1991, I was working on my computer when the power blinked off, just long enough for me to lose my work. Immediately after that, the phone rang. When I answered, I heard nothing but breathing. Suddenly an eerie feeling swept over my body. Feeling inexplicably tired, I went to bed and read for a while before falling asleep.

When I awoke, I remembered the following incident that occurred during the night: Some type of force, like a powerful magnet or giant vacuum, pulled me out of bed and sped me through the air. I ended up in what I first believed to be a spaceship that was whirling around. When the whirling stopped, I found myself in a room that seemed to be part of a mansion. The room was decorated elaborately with valuable antiques. As soon as I spotted a telephone sitting on a table, I told myself I must not be in a spaceship. But then one of the large-eyed, chalky-colored aliens led me into another room and made me lie down. My vision became fuzzy as I tried to watch additional creatures perform gynecological-type procedures on me. At one point, I screamed out in excruciating pain for them to stop. The alien standing to my right told me everything would be okay, that I wouldn't remember anything. I then lost consciousness, and the next thing I knew, I was back home.

When I got up the next morning, I tried to explain away the irritating, burning sensation in my vaginal area to something I ate, and the nighttime encounter as merely a vivid dream. It was safer that way, not wanting to admit I'd had another abduction experience.

The encounters themselves didn't frighten me. What frightened me was the threat to the reality I'd known all my life. Still, there was a part of me that had to know the truth.

On May 17, 1991, I had a hypnosis session to determine whether or not this experience was a real event rather than an unusually vivid dream, and if so, what additional details may have been blocked from my memory. Under hypnosis, I first remembered that the force field that took me out of the house was a misty white color, similar to fog.

Once aboard the craft, I lay on a table as the creatures adjusted medical equipment over my head. A needle pierced my abdomen all the way into what felt like my right ovary, causing the excruciating pain I had remembered before. The aliens poked around inside and scraped samples from the vagina. I saw a creature holding a small black box in his hand.

The next thing I knew, I found myself back at home, sitting in the hallway outside my daughter's room. There had been no mansion, no room filled with antiques, no telephone. Apparently, those were screen memories the aliens used to make my experience more palatable.

Through later conscious recollections and further hypnotic regressions, I have remembered more about these chalky-colored creatures. They took me aboard their craft when I was approximately three years old and let me drive, or pretend to drive it. They once cured me of an illness, assuring me they would take care of me. In the form of a hologram, they showed me a young boy and told me they had used my ova to produce him. They showed me a room full of hybrid babies and let me know they were trying to improve their race; I got the impression this was for our mutual benefit.

Because I am always put in an altered state during these encounters, I can't ask the many questions I have about these entities. I want to know where they come from, what their ultimate goal is, how they perceive and relate to God. I want to know where our hybrid children are and what the future holds for them. I want to know how long they've been abducting Earthlings and what criteria they used in selecting me.

My abduction experiences are ongoing. They have changed my life and viewpoints. I no longer teach accounting. I spend all my time offering support to fellow abductees and trying to educate the public about the existence of the abduction phenomenon, even though I don't understand it myself. I often wonder if some or all of my encounters have been the result of the interrogations and brainwashing apparent military and government agents have put me through. In any case, I am experiencing something out of the ordinary, and many other people report very similar experiences. Hopefully, by supporting each other and communicating openly, we will someday have a complete understanding of what is going on and why.  $\infty$

Biosphere 'soap' enters new chapter

ORACLE, Ariz. (AP) — The Biosphere 2 story has always been less science than soap opera: Could eight people survive for two years sealed off from the outside world in a high-tech ecological bubble?

Survive they did. However, the project's credibility suffered.

Organizers delayed or played down setbacks like crop failures and losses of oxygen in the glass compound's atmosphere.

Now the private, for-profit project plans to send a new crew of seven into the 1.2-hectare dome in the desert north of Tucson on Sunday.

But instead of completely sealing the dome, they'll allow scientists and eventually other visitors to enter for short stays. A permanent crew will live inside, but its members will change periodically like a relay team, say officials of Space Biospheres Ventures.

The change received qualified endorsements from some mainstream scientists who have been critical of Biosphere.

"If you want to do science, you have to have that kind of flexibility, and it doesn't spoil the experiment," said Thomas Lovejoy, vice-president for external affairs of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

"As long as you measure what you take in and take out, you have a valid experiment going."

Lovejoy was the chairman of an outside advisory committee that examined the project but then resigned over differences with project managers.

Biosphere 2's first "mission" ended last Sept. 26, when four men and four women emerged after two years of tending and studying the giant terrarium, which holds a miniature farm, rain forest, marsh, ocean, savannah and desert.

They managed to raise 80 per cent of the food they needed. One crew member had to leave briefly for finger surgery after an accident.

The atmosphere had to be balanced with carbon dioxide-scrubbing equipment and oxygen injections instead of the natural interplay of plants and animals as planned.

In the last five months, all the plants in the glass-and-steel structure have been surveyed and several mechanical systems upgraded.

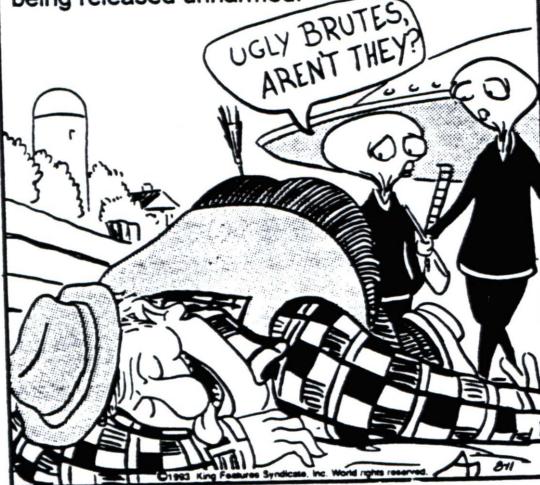

In the second phase, teachers, technical specialists, managers, environmentalists — even business people — will be eligible for stays of a few weeks to months.

Biosphere 2 was designed as a 100-year experiment to study Biosphere 1 — the Earth. Organizers hope to solve environmental problems and develop technology with commercial potential for use on Earth and in space.

SECRET MISSIONS TO THE MOON AND MARS CONTINUE: WHY???

by BILL KNELL

After the obvious failure of the MARS OBSERVER (and we've written our say on that in previous issues), it became painfully obvious that the American People were NOT getting the whole story when it came to space probes. People asked WHY the Observer was the first probe ever launched by us with such an important and expensive Mission Objective that didn't have a redundant probe sent after it? Then, there were the stories of smaller launches, less public ones, that would ultimately accomplish much of what was lost with OBSERVER. But, what IS the purpose of these probes and rocket launches and why did it take a disaster like OBSERVER to bring this information out?

How of you reading this know that a Moon Rocket was launched from Vandenburg A.F.B. Spaceport in California, USA in January of 1994? It barely rated a mention on local news and I didn't see any mention on any national news that I watched? What was the purpose of that launch. After calling NASA I was told it was part of a new program to radar map the Moon. But, why had no one been told about this before? Why was the military involved (how deep is the Military involved in any or all current or former Moon projects?).

A source at Vandenburg told me when I visited California last summer that beyond secret Shuttle (Space Shuttle) launches that I have written about previously, several probes had been sent to Mars, but on a much smaller scale then that of the Observer. But, all were clearly MILITARY Missions launched from a strictly military spaceport!

Now you can decide for yourself what exactly is happening. In my new and updated version of my slide/lecture THE UFO COVER-UP! I discuss all this and more including the fascinating ALTERNATIVE 3 (a British Docu-drama-documentary) and the PHILADELPHIA EXPERIMENT/ 1960s PHILLY TECHNOLOGY and STEALTH EXPERIMENTS (a C-130 takes off in the 1960s, but seconds later lands in the 1980s!) / MONTAUK PROJECT and much more. You can now order the newly updated UFO COVER-UP lecture on video for just $30 from the address above (this newsletter). We pay postage. Also, the ALTERNATIVE 3 program (aired only once on the BBC TV, dealt with mysterious scientist/astronaut deaths connected to a secret, multi-national space program, secret Moon Bases, earlier landings by men on the moon then Apollo 11, bases on Mars and much more!) is available on video (PLUS an extra segment by BILL KNELL on UFOs and NASA) for just $30. And, a special treat for newsletter subscribers only, ultra-RARE copies of the book ALTERNATIVE 3 are now available for $25.00 each from this newsletter as well. U.S. POSTAGE IS PAID, OTHERS ADD $5 PER ITEM.

For those who have asked me where they could obtain either the book ALTERNATIVE 3 or the video of the same name, the above source can fill your request.

UFO POTPCURRI - MAY, 1994

SPIELBERG TO EXPOSE UFO COVER-UPS

According to the 22 December 1993 issue of the LONDON DAILY MIRROR, director Steven Spielberg is deserting science fiction - for science fact. The MIRROR Spielberg is secretly working on a movie with a fifty million pound budget that he claims will unmask a government cover-up of an alien spaceship crash in New Mexico in 1947.

PROJECT X is based on the Roswell Air Force base incident. Supposedly, Spielberg believes the U.S. military took away alien bodies from the crashed UFO. Hollywood insiders say the director has got hold of previously unseen film footage of the flying saucer taken by a military officer. The movie is about the UFO crash and the political intrigue that followed.

Spielberg has already got a team at Hamlin Productions working on the script. The movie is due for release in 1997 - the 50th anniversary of the Roswell crash.

For Spielberg to make an investment of this magnitude, he must be very confident that the Congressman Schiff GAO investigation is going to go nowhere. And he may be correct. Insiders are saying that the answer is already written. It will be a better whitewash than the Condon Report. Don't be surprised if some new kinds of balloons aren't blamed for whole affair.

CHINESE REPORT UFOS

More than 6,000 UFOs have been sighted over the channel between China and Taiwan. Reported by China's Xinhua News Agency, this story was published in the EDINBURGH SCOTSMAN on 8 December 1993. The news agency was reporting on the first China-Taiwan UFO Symposium which was being held in Beijing, China, where scientists on both sides said the thousands of UFO sightings deserved more scientific study.

A British newspaper, the WATFORD OBSERVER, states that the Chinese UFO journal, Feidie Tansuo, sells 300,000 copies each month in China. Considering the poor economic conditions in China, that is an outstanding circulation for a periodical.

It is rather astounding that UFO activity of this magnitude has gone unreported in the U.S. media, even the tabloid press. Why have we not seen some mention of these UFO reports in any of the major newspapers? CNN missed the boat also. Why? The EDINBURGH SCOTSMAN received the story from the Reuter New Service and that is how I found out about it. That service is received in the United States also. Why was it ignored? Even if our media giants believe 6,000 UFO reports to be too insignificant to be newsworthy, isn't the fact that China and Taiwan were able to meet together in Beijing for a major UFO conference newsworthy?

German language rights to Alien Identities -- Ancient Insights into Modern UFO Phenomena by Richard L. Thompson have just been eagerly acquired by Bettendorf, the prestigious German publisher of the works of best-selling author Baron Johannes Von Buttlar. Dieter Obergfell, C.E.O. of Bettendorf, said "We are very excited to be able to present Dr. Thompson's new book. We feel it is an important contribution to the field and, like many of the reviewers, believe it will become a classic." Bettendorf will begin with a first run of 5,000 copies. Further foreign language rights discussions have been initiated in Poland, Holland and Italy.

Launched in November 1993 by Govardhan Hill Publishing with an initial print run of 5,000, Alien Identities has been well received by both the trade and general public in the U.S.A., and went back to the printers in January with a further run of 3,500 copies.

ETs AND ALIEN VISITORS

Who are they? Where do they come from?
What can we expect from them?

Since 1947 researchers have exhaustively documented the reality of UFOs. But questions still remain about the origins of these strange craft and the intentions of the beings who pilot them. In ALIEN IDENTITIES, Richard L. Thompson shows that the answers may lie in the records of an ancient civilization with thousands of years of contacts with extra-terrestrial races. Startling parallels between modern UFO accounts and the ancient Sanskrit writings of India give fresh insights into the identity and purposes of UFO visitors.

Even now in November of 1992 my perception remains clouded concerning the correlation between the extent of the UFO-Aliens' activity, and the Kuwaiti war, taken as a generalized event. Primarily this follows from the fact of the inadequacy of refined intelligence data, for the simple rate of incidence of UFO sightings, that is available to civilians. Yet one can readily imagine that the significant nature of UFO-Alien activities correlating with this war, may be poorly perceived, or entirely missed by us. Scholars will, no doubt, later obtain better data relating to these points. Nevertheless, my current impression for the Kuwaiti case is that while there was not a huge, widespread surge of UFO sightings--very significant activity was recorded for certain restricted geographical areas. One can cite, here, Belgium (ref. nos. 1-3), and perhaps France (ref. no. 4, pp. 6-7), the Florida theater (less Mr. Ed.), with its CSETI interaction (ref. no. 5, pp. 25-31), and sightings made in conjunction with the English crop pictograms (ref. no. 6, pp. 2-4).

The most important things to comprehend would seem to be: that, again, a specifically characterized military conflict (Kuwait) was accompanied by a dramatic enhancement of the UFO-Aliens' activity; and that, again, the Aliens' activity was, evidently, in part, directed toward the conflict item. For these decisions one need hardly register other than the special Belgian military-political connection; although, it has by this time become more manifest that the crop pictogram factor must be understood as "UFO-Alien activity." Consequently, there was a huge data element of activity recorded for these Aliens. The extraordinary proximity of Belgium and southern England has to be noted; and a recognized, meaningful correlation could emerge, linking the English crop figures with the military features of southern England.

Since the publication of the May, 1991 issue of this series there have been a number of developments that merit comment.

In retrospect, considering the disintegration of the U.S.S.R., it is clearer that for the Kuwaiti war, the two superpowers were not seriously opposed, as can be contrasted with the situations of Vietnam, and Egypt-Israel of 1973. Possibly, then, the lack of the imminent threat of global catastrophe at Kuwait could relate to the apparent lack of a widespread surge of UFO sightings for that incident. We are now better informed about Iraq's recent nuclear capabilities and intentions. Thus, the former, serious potential of the Kuwaiti conflict is underscored; and given the post-U.S.S.R. climate of hostilities, social instability, and proliferation of nuclear technology--we do have ample justification for, currently, viewing the human prospects for the next few decades, with grave concern. I think it is logical to expect that for these coming years, activity of the UFO-Aliens will correlate with certain aspects of the human, social sphere, as it has from the time of WWII. But, as projected out of the context of our total experience, the anticipation of various escalations of the UFO-Aliens' activity, within this same future period, would also seem to be logical.

The great importance of the new crop circle-pictogram facet of the modern "UFO phenomenon" was treated fairly extensively in the previous Commentary (ref. no.7, pp. 2-4). To summarize briefly, and as of this time, it is apparent, that no satisfactory, natural explanation will be possible; that an intelligence directs the formation of these figures; that a human agency cannot account for the relevant data; and that there are strong UFO-Alien associations with these phenomena, besides the fact that the UFO-Aliens represent the available, credible means by which these crop figures can be produced. Given the absolute necessity for seriously examining the entire UFO phenomenon in valid Judeo-Christian terms; and in relation to the very plausible secretiveness otherwise exhibited by the "UFO-Aliens"; one has to observe that the presumed operational force of the Second Coming has taken an astonishingly overt, dramatic initiative by introducing the figures. Therefore, I assert that, beyond the ambiguity of all philosophical relativism and other aberrations, in reality, one correctly infers that the introduction of these figures carries an important, or a major, end-times connotation.

So, in the summer of 1991 we had much more of the pictograms, with novelties, and they were still concentrated in southern England; for the summer of 1992 the same can be said. It's probably worth mentioning that the U.S.S.R. ceased to exist in the late summer of 1991, and that its remnants continue in desperate uncertainty at the close of 1992.

For the poorly informed public, the inherently untenable claims, made in the summer of 1991, by Mr. Douglas Bower and Mr. David Chorley, about their responsibility for the crop figure mystery, because of their having secretly created these figures, did succeed in producing substantial confusion and doubt (ref. nos. 8; 9; and 10, pp. 44-45). However, objective scrutiny of the alleged hoaxers various claims; the continued occurrence of figure formation subsequent to Doug's and Dave's departure from the scene; and the credible gains of reputable crop figure researchers (ref. nos. 11 and 12), all combine to simply affirm the fundamentally unconventional nature of this crop figure phenomenon. From the Doug and Dave episode we can be cautioned concerning the known element of hoaxing, but one must note, too, the eagerness of established social interests to jump to reassuring conclusions. As a point of historical instruction we have the example of Time magazine (U.S.A., ref. no. 13). There, in its "Best of 1991-Science" year-end feature, Time finds that for this transparently dubious, and discredited, alleged hoax--the story of which, was released by the London tabloid Today--"Crop Circles" ...have been..."Demystified," and that this is "a victory of skeptical scientific inquiry over tabloid headlines." Science has no victory over the truth about crop pictograms, nor over the general UFO-Alien-Angel situation. What humans should understand is that in relative but real terms, their twisted, perverse blindness faces imminent termination.

The legitimate scientific study of the crop figures reveals more and more of curious technical details (ref. nos. 6, 11, and 12); and reports of UFOs seen in association with crop figures, and even video tapes of these UFOs, are accumulating (ref. nos.

6; 14; and no. 12, pp. 14-15). In the following item, of developments since the last publication, I will discuss the new "active interaction" aspect of the UFO phenomenon (ref. no. 5, pp. 10-23); although that topic can serve to end this treatment of crop figures. I will merely offer, here, a brief statement pertaining to the crop figures. During the latter part of the summer of 1992, while numerous researchers from Circles Phenomena Research (CPR) of England, and the Center for the Study of Extraterrestrial Intelligence (CSETI, of the U.S.A.) were cooperating in vigils and experiments at crop figure locations in southern England, certain strange things happened, in addition to the sighting of UFOs. The chosen crop figure test sites were selected partly for their history of reported UFO activity (ref. no. 6, pp. 2-4). Among others, Dr. Steven Greer of CSETI, and Mr. Colin Andrews of CPR, participated in elaborate procedures designed for interacting with any UFO-Aliens at the site areas, or to attract UFO-Aliens to the sites, and to engage in any communications with them there. Evidently very significant results were obtained, including the rather close approach of a good-sized UFO, plus the exchange of primitive light blinking signals between the researchers and the UFO manifestations. Proper interpretation of these complex, amazing new results would seem to require acknowledgement of the existence of another powerful argument for UFO-Aliens being the causative agency for the production of these crop figures.

The body of literature recorded from carefully investigated UFO sighting reports contains many instances of the witnesses to these chance encounters, receiving apparent responses from the UFO-Aliens, when they attempt to communicate with the UFO, through such means as blinking the car's headlights, waving, speaking, or just by thinking (CE-5, 2nd degree). Serious reports exist, however, regarding UFO sightings that occurred in response to purposeful, individual human thought, or to other focused activities (CE-5, 1st degree). Of course the related subject, of the response by the UFO-Aliens to our wars, has been discussed; they also seem to have reacted to certain lights, and light configurations, that weren't intentionally employed to "attract UFOs" (ref. no. 5, pp. 10-14).

Now the amazing news is that CSETI, under the direction of Dr. Steven Greer, has developed and successfully tested, elaborate procedures, involving sound and light signals, and thought projection--to communicate with UFO-Aliens, and, in fact, to precipitate UFO appearances, with the ensuing exchange of signaling communications. As of the present (12/27/92), three major communications successes have taken place; all in 1992, and each in one of three notable geographic areas of recent, heightened UFO activity: Belgium; Gulf Breeze, Florida; and southern England. The approximate dates of these historic events are, for Belgium, February (ref. nos. 3; and 5, pp. 33-40), for Florida, March (ref. no. 5, pp. 25-31), and for southern England, July (ref. no. 6, pp. 2-4). This revolutionary active-interaction situation is very new, and it obviously entails the promise of great significance. Clearly we should pay close attention to any kind of furtherance of the UFO-Alien (Angels') overtness initiatives.

Within the past several years civilian UFO researchers have achieved an important breakthrough that came from the study of cases in which people were abducted by UFO-Aliens. Central to this development is the specific understanding that in nearly all of these abductions, people progress through an extremely thorough "examination process" comprised of standardized, sequential steps. Hence we realize that much of what abductees report from these cases actually relates to--what they are able to recall--about one or more of the steps. Knowledge of this abduction activity does also clearly show us that the UFO-Aliens are, as a basic endeavor, engaged in the large-scale production of a type of hybrid that they make from the egg and sperm samples that are routinely collected during the stepwise process. It's evident that this colossal, concerted breeding program has been going on for some time, and that it must constitute a very significant part of the UFO-Aliens' activity. So today, a leading question in ufology revolves around the reason for the production of these, our transformed "children." The two main references for this subject are Dr. Thomas E. Bullard's comprehensive, pioneering work entitled UFO Abductions--The Measure of a Mystery (ref. no. 15); and Dr. David M. Jacobs' excellent new book Secret Life (ref. no. 16).

The absence of tangible evidence--in the form of Alien artifacts--has always been a chief problem for civilian ufology. Nonetheless, we now have arrived at the point where the civilian sector possesses strong evidence that the military of the U.S.A. has recovered "crashed" UFOs; and, apparently, advanced alien life-forms from them, as early as 1947 at Corona, New Mexico (ref. nos. 17; and 18, p. 3). Another case of considerable interest comes from 1965 at Kecksburgh, Pennsylvania (ref. no. 19). Yet at present there is other concrete evidence: these artifacts are the UFO-Aliens' implants that were recovered from people's bodies. In a recent paper John E. Mack, M.D., of the Harvard Medical School, mentions three such objects that are "under study" (ref. no. 20, pp. 41-42). Only yesterday (1/1/93) I was informed that one more of these small objects was just removed from an abductee's ear cavity--to be studied.

We can see the evidence, for the truth about the UFO-Alien situation, steadily growing and advancing. From my perspective it's difficult to see how the official lie of the U.S.A., regarding the UFO-Alien predicament, can survive. It doesn't survive due to the absence of evidence.

Of course the rarity of our independent verification for the reports of human abductions, by the UFO-Aliens, has been a problem for UFO researchers; and that together with the fact that most of these abduction accounts require the use of hypnotism (or possibly, other similar means) to bring the objective content of the abductions into the conscious minds of the abductees.

But today, with the amazing evidence from Mr. Budd Hopkins' landmark "Linda Cortile" abduction case (released in 1992, see ref. nos. 21 and 22), the proponents for the truth about the reality of the UFO-Alien presence, along with its extensive abduction program, have received dramatic support. Briefly, then, for this case: Mrs. "L. Cortile" had already undergone several months of investigation by Mr. Hopkins, concerning her abductions since childhood, when one night in November of 1989 the highly significant abduction happened. She reported the new incident to Mr. Hopkins within twelve hours. Starting from that juncture this specific event appeared, superficially, to be the standard abduction episode, as described by Bullard-Jacobs. However, as Mr. Hopkins was later to learn, when the three UFO-Aliens took her through the closed bedroom windows to the UFO waiting outside; the mixed group was suspended twelve stories up, in plain view, above her street, near the Brooklyn Bridge, in N.Y., N.Y.; AND a number of witnesses saw the group float up into the conspicuously luminous UFO, which quickly flew away. Some witnesses saw the UFO dive into the East River; electrical systems of cars failed and lights on the Brooklyn Bridge also reportedly were affected, due to the presence of the UFO. Furthermore, one of the observers, who is politically prominent, and his two official driver-escorts were prime witnesses to the abduction; AND they contacted Mr. Hopkins about it, fifteen months later, without knowing that he had already been investigating the incident. At the time of their contact, Mr. Hopkins still was unaware of much of what had transpired outside of the woman's apartment on the night in November 1989. The investigation of (and controversy over) this case hasn't ended; there are many important details; and the whole affair presents a threat to the big UFO cover-up. The identity of the politically prominent individual is known by Mr. Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins feels that this abduction was "staged" especially for the benefit of the prominent individual, and thereby for our world.

During the past two years Miss Linda Moulton Howe and her associates (ref. nos. 23, 24, and 25) have provided us with data regarding the continuing "animal mutilation" facet of the UFO-Aliens' activity. Besides the reports of UFOs witnessed in the immediate context of the animal mutilations, there are reports of the UFO-Aliens' having been seen doing the operations on the ground--and aboard their ships, as recounted by abductees. Moreover, abductees have reported that the UFO-Aliens imparted to them the information that these certain biological specimens were used variously in the production of the human, hybrid creatures (ref. no. 24, pp. 145-147). Given our new insight from Bullard-Jacobs (ref. nos. 15 and 16) about the central place of the large-scale production of the hybrids, it seems very reasonable to think of the "mutilations" just so: as a logical part of the greater conception of UFO-Alien activity. The artificially nurtured hybrid fetuses are probably produced, at least, by the thousands.

The remainder of this paper is devoted to the discussion of a number of considerations that are involved with the general understanding of the "UFO-Alien" phenomenon and with the ways that humans relate to it.

As a fundamental principle one must acknowledge that among a group of mutually exclusive explanations for something, possibly none, but no more than one, can be correct. People's comprehensive, philosophical views--of themselves with all that exists--inherently partake of the nature of this type of set. By reasoning then, acceptance of one of these particular world-views depends upon its distinguishing accommodation of all information: of the general data. From its beginnings with the Exodus cloud-fire pillar, and through the stressed element of Jesus, about his returning from Heaven with the Angels, to establish an entirely new social order on Earth, valid Christianity is a totally exclusive world-view. Truth is absolute, and therefore totally exclusive. Certainly the valid Christian world-view does share parts of its content with other religions and "comprehensive" philosophies; however, the exclusiveness depends upon the unique identity of the whole, as is centered in Christ. Furthermore, it is clear enough that valid Christianity specifically does accommodate the UFO-Alien data extraordinarily well. Beyond the relatively straightforward task of gathering and analyzing the basic UFO-Alien data, there awaits the additional, complex problem of formulating a general explanation for the UFO-Alien phenomenon, and that explanation has to be harmoniously integrated within a world-view.

Of course I am aware of how controversial the real, general estimate is. Superior new ways of thinking are commonly known to become established through the mechanism of acceptance by a new generation, because the young are spared the prohibitive step of discarding discredited views. I suppose admission of the UFO-Alien presence interferes with people's ground of being, inasmuch as the phenomenon doesn't fit into reality as they perceive it. But advanced Alien creatures have minds of their own, and a (i.e., the) reality of their own; evidently they have plans that they shall carry out whether humans are confused or not, rational or not, ignorant or not, and approving or not.

So, for objectively forming a general estimate, valid Christianity and the reliable UFO-Alien data have to be seriously and comprehensively considered--together. Then it is necessary to realize that since there can only be one true, general explanation for the UFO-Alien presence, the coincidence of the UFO-Alien data with the conceptual model of Angels of the Second Coming operation, from valid Christianity, yields the transcendent conclusion: that we are actually seeing a commenced phase of the Second Coming operation. While all details may not be clear, one should understand that it is the deep, general nature of the argument that determines the matter. It also follows that deliberations on current, leading questions of ufology, plus a great deal of other thinking, need to be conducted within the context of the comprehensive philosophical construction.

Everyone, and particularly young students of the so-called UFO phenomenon, should understand that ufologists frequently make statements that are essentially assertive appeals. Although the content of these pronouncements often either directly or indirectly rejects the Second Coming finding, no rigorous refutation of the reasoning, as just presented, can be made. From Dr. J. Allen Hynek we have (ref. no. 26, p. 232) "there will surely be" ---"a twenty-first century science and a thirtieth century science," and (from p. 234) "When the long awaited solution to the UFO problem comes, I believe that it will prove to be not merely the next small step in the march of science but a mighty and totally unexpected quantum jump." Is the Second Coming of Christ to be regarded as a mighty step in the advancement of science? Surely the idea of a thirtieth century science for humans is poorly suited to valid Christianity. Whereas Dr. David M. Jacobs (ref. no. 16, p. 305) says that the UFO-Aliens aren't allowing us to fully know their agenda, he declares that "They are not here to help us." What about the Second Coming? Dr. Steven M. Greer offers that (ref. no. 5, p. 44) "In the coming decades, centuries and millennia, it will be increasingly realized that the success of humanity's existence will be dependent on the development of consciousness more than on any outward progress." Continuing, Dr. Greer (p. 53) encourages people to relate to the UFO-Aliens positively, least we have "only one chance to create a world--and a universe--guided by virtue." From within the valid Christian framework one doesn't even expect humans, strictly speaking, to "create" a successful world order. What guide to virtue is the denial of Christ? What can realistically be expected for the amount of time remaining? Decades: probably; centuries: possibly, but not likely; millennia: hardly. I would invite the reader to carefully examine the official statement of "technological objectives and overall philosophy relevant to the phenomenon known as Unidentified Flying Objects" (ref. no. 27, p. 3), as was restated by the International Director of MUFON, Mr. Walter H. Andrus, Jr. The "four basic questions" that MUFON is expressly dedicated to answering, scarcely acknowledge, as a relevant possibility, that the "UFO phenomenon" is, in essence, an active phase of the Second Coming operation.

I certainly am aware of and appreciate the considerable contributions of these four ufologists; I have had the pleasure of meeting with each of them; and I bear no ill will toward any of them. However, the formulation of a credible, general estimate of our situation absolutely requires that the valid Christian factor be treated explicitly, and fully. Now, especially in recognition of the transcendent stature of the rigorously derived Second Coming finding, people should understand that assertive statements which either directly or indirectly ignore, and contradict the valid Christian element, lack a firm philosophical basis.

The vast amount of UFO-Alien data that has long been available to civilians is perfectly adequate for determining the general estimate. If, in fact, the federal government of the U.S.A. has in its possession the remains of "crashed" UFOs and members of their alien crews, this gives the federal, executive elite practically no advantage over civilians, as to formulating the legitimate, general estimate concerning the UFO-Aliens. The big secret is that the UFO-Alien force is operating here. Therefore, they are the force of the Second Coming operation. In the big picture, it doesn't matter how many fingers they have, and so on. What a federal analyst of the U.S.A., or anyone, needs is a knowledge of valid Christianity (i.e., Judeo-Christianity) and an understanding of how to correctly reason through to the general estimate. But what sort of philosophy has been found in Washington, D.C. lately? Well, there was astrology; fundamentalist Christianity; a lot of military-intelligence thinking; and probably no small amount of secular, intellectual belief. Akin to this latter item one would, no doubt, find a significant coloring of "revisionist Christianity," which has rid itself of the embarrassment of the crucial Second Coming concept.

Presidents of the United States of America are no longer free to mention the UFO-Alien presence. They have become captives of their policy of lying to the people about it; then pretending to ignore it; and hoping that events will not expose them. Today neither events, nor the people, or even the media, are under control. In the U.S.A., the president's position is so weak that he cannot risk any indirect, negative statement about the UFO-Alien presence. From here the negative option leads, after waiting and hoping, to increased suppression of the truth. It leads to more elaborate disinformation, to more cleverly dividing the people against themselves, and to bigger lies. Appealing arguments can be crafted in favor of the policy of deceit, but nothing can stand against the counsels that the policy is wrong, and that it is unworkable. As it was with the chains of slavery, this new bondage of the intellect violates the fundamental democratic contract of the government with the people. Our history will record that President William Jefferson Clinton was the first president of the United States of America to be raised from the cradle under the special U.S. federal policy of suppressing the truth about the UFO-Alien presence. More than "the whole world" is watching to see if he signs on to the super problem.

It's a tough one, Mr. President. When you get on an open T.V. show, you're liable to have to step forward and say "that's a matter of national security." Look out for this, too: when the First Lady does a comprehensive review of the medical situation, she should come afoul of the mental health needs of the abductees. That's already something, and it's plenty open-ended. Dr. Mack of the Harvard Medical School is trying his best to educate mental health professionals to the reality of the UFO-Alien abductions. What next?

Human thought will never be able to escape the manifest implications from the disciplined, valid view: that we can reasonably expect only the one operational force to have abruptly established its presence on Earth. The basic Second Coming finding is, then, redundantly confirmed through a second philosophical phase: that of their characterization by their activities. The empirical data paints them as being preoccupied with our wars; and with the means of nuclear destruction. Ufologists correctly understand that Corona, New Mexico was no random place for a UFO to have "crashed" in the summer of 1947: there near the "Trinity Site," there near V-2 rocket testing, and there to be retrieved by the 509th Bomb Wing, of Nagasaki-Hiroshima experience (ref. no. 17, p. 78). The valid, comprehensive model also provides the means for our proper, general understanding of the newly recognized abduction-examination- hybrid babies-production data. This hybrid babies project constitutes a central emphasis of the UFO-Alien activities. From within the valid context, it becomes intelligible as a preparatory undertaking, that is consistent with their preoccupation with the means of nuclear catastrophe, as both of these major items are consistent with the expectation of unprecedented "trouble." Because of the intrinsic nature and tremendous magnitude of the involvement of the UFO-Aliens with the human experience--that we now perceive in the abduction package--it is essentially inconceivable that this special grouping of events could be other than a Second Coming accompaniment. One cannot be too surprised with the idea of the Angels of the Second Coming (the reapers) giving people a fantastically thorough, searching examination. Thus, in general, the abduction-examination-hybrid babies data package fits as further, appropriate characterization. A specific speculation regarding these babies would have them functioning in an advanced (takeover) stage of the Second Coming. Another speculation, which to me seems less likely, is that the hybrid fetuses are infused with departed spirits--as an integral part of the Second Coming operation.

Mr. Raymond E. Fowler's accounts, from the investigations of Mrs. Betty Andreasson's abductions, present data in the form of purported communications from the UFO-Aliens. Among these (ref. no. 28, p. 86) is the statement that they are preparing ordinary human individuals "for a helpful role in their overall plan for mankind." Only in the Second Coming operation can one reasonably expect an Alien force to be carrying out an "overall plan for Mankind."

Based on my investigative work in the New Hampshire seacoast region, since January of 1969, I have concluded that the UFO-Aliens had for years used a series of associated, local swamps as nocturnal hiding pens while they kept track of the activity of the nearby Strategic Air Command Base (Pease) at Newington, NH. According to my numbering system, The Incident at Exeter (ref. no 29), of Sept. 3, 1965, took place at swamp number two. Officer Eugene Bertrand, of the Exeter, NH, P.D., initially saw the UFO as it lifted up out of swamp number two, and then came to him and Norman Muscarello. Note that the 509th Bomb Wing (Hiroshima, Aug. 1945, to Corona, New Mexico, July 1947) moved into Pease A.F.B. in March of 1966-- as I understand, with an escort of close encounters. On Sept. 30, 1982 a very important multiple witness, nocturnal close encounter occurred in Hampton, New Hampshire (ref. no. 30, and ref. no. 31, pp. 4-7) under the primary Pease A.F.B. landing pattern, and on the edge of swamp number one. This latter, large UFO departed from the witnesses by descending silently from the tree-top height of a low hill, down into swamp number one; hence going conveniently out of sight, and out of possible radar coverage. The two most prominently active witnesses in this case described to me how they had run to almost directly under the large, hovering, soundless UFO, which had a huge, oval beam emanating downward from it. Then while they stood transfixed (apparently under a degree of Alien mind-control), during a matter of perhaps several seconds, one of them received a powerful telepathic communication. The stunning, chief part of the communication was--from the witness' unmistakable understanding of what the UFO-Aliens were telling her--that: there really are evil humans, and that they--the UFO-Aliens--are going to get rid of the evil human individuals. The other of these two witnesses readily attested to the heavy impact that this communication had had on her friend in the weeks following the encounter.

It is my considered opinion that the witness in question evidently did perceive the communication as she described it; and that the rest of this classic, Exeter type, close encounter, as was described by all of the group of four witnesses, should correctly be regarded as true beyond a reasonable doubt. One can note that the referenced I.U.R. article does not specifically mention the telepathic communication; however, that article does discuss the results of another portion of the communication.

When we acquired nuclear weapons, we acquired the UFO-Alien force. That force is preoccupied with monitoring our military-nuclear activity, and apparently they even took time out from WATCHING the 509th Bomb Wing to tell someone that they shall do precisely what the Angels of the Second Coming are supposed to do. They are the reapers.

The general issue of how humans should relate to the UFO-Aliens goes to the heart of how one should relate to other intelligent entities. As things have been, if people do evil in this world, they may get away with it--in this world: in the first life. But the Angels of the Second Coming operation aren't from this world. They have rules of their own. So, besides the fact that humans should love God above all else, and their neighbors as themselves; humans should now, also, clearly understand their individual positions in relation to those who are charged with the responsibility of eliminating all the sources of evil from this planet.

I can imagine that if I were in the presence of one of the UFO-Alien entities that I would want to be extremely alert. I would have to assume that my thoughts were being read; even though I couldn't be sure of distinguishing a "robot" from a "Doctor." If a Doctor did scan my mind he would find little other than this: I know, in general terms, what is going on, but there is much for me to learn. I wish to be cooperative and to behave properly. I realize that there must be constraints on what I can be told; but I want to learn all that I can from this experience. In any medical procedure I would appreciate your being mindful of the physical pain factor. We receive disturbing reports concerning seemingly arbitrary treatment of humans in such sensitive areas as sexual conduct. May God's will be done soon in the rectification of the horrible mess that is this world. I do what I can to help people understand what is actually happening.

Exactly what will a "Doctor" find inside your mind?

Individually and collectively, humans are in an extremely serious situation. Now, especially, people simply can't afford to be guided by lies, misinformation, and fragments of philosophy. Has reality really come to Washington, D.C.? My history of the modern world won't pretend not to notice the UFO-Alien reality.

There is a great deal to learn about the dynamically developing "UFO-Alien" presence. I must think that the correct, the best, the responsible, and the ultimately workable policy for collective human action, in this situation, is to gather reliable information, to analyze and organize it, and then to efficiently disseminate the processed product as inoffensively as possible. One can readily understand, too, that lacking an appropriate response from contemporary Christian institutions, that their deadness will give way to a new stem which is generated from their root, by truth, and rises toward the light of love.

I reiterate, that the answer to the general question of how to relate to the UFO-Aliens comes from the newly expanded context of the valid Christian world-view. Relating, here, means the having of transactions between intelligent entities. Consequently we must be cognizant of all of the entities. These are no less than: God, Jesus, the UFO-Alien-Angels, and humans. We need to become familiar with this total community, into which the human elect will be incorporated.

A legitimate, technical analysis of the functioning of human societies cannot avoid discovering the factor of morality; which is the same as what has variously been found in our systems of religious principles. There is one such thing that has its particular functional place in the one great structure of reality. Physics, chemistry, biology, ecology, psychology, sociology, philosophy, economics, commerce, law, morality, and theology: all of these things are related. None of them exists in a separate world; not for us, and not for the UFO-Aliens. Our problems, their causes, and the reasonable approaches to their solutions, remain largely as they were before the manifestation of the UFO-Alien presence to our modern cultures. What has changed fundamentally, with the advent of this presence, is that henceforth, humans shall live, being openly confronted by this tangible element that specifically implies the decisive intervention; and that some established human social orders have taken up the perceived necessity of attempting to seal the frontiers of people's minds against the truth about this superior, autonomous agency.

Frozen bodies await revival in 150 years

The Washington Post APRIL 1993

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — In death they stand on their heads nestled four to a canister — the professor, the TV repairman, the writer and the home-maker. Submerged in superchilled liquid nitrogen, they are as rigid as the breaded fishsticks in your grocer's freezer.

This is the easy part of achieving immortality through freezing, a technique known as cryonic suspension. The hard part comes when somebody thaws these four bodies and tries to bring them back to life.

If that ever happens, they and 21 other "patients" stored here at the Alcor Life Extension Foundation will become the Rip Van Winkles of the 20th century, albeit at a charge of up to $120,000 US apiece (though freezing only your head costs $41,000). The hope is that medical science will advance enough to revive everybody in about 150 years, ushering them into the future with renewed youth and vitality, even if also with a huge gap on their resumes.

But the future is getting a mite crowded at Alcor. At the current pace of sign-ups the facility will house a small, mute city of the frozen by the end of the next generation, with a population-in-waiting building toward 1,000, supported by a trust fund that already tops $2 million.

Critics, and there are plenty, call cryonics nonsense — at best a laughable delusion, at worst a scam robbing bereaved relatives of money and a dignified farewell. Health departments and hospitals have occasionally fought cryonicists to their knees, although in recent years Alcor has overcome its challengers in a series of widely publicized court cases.

And there's no denying that its popularity is increasing here at the largest and richest of the world's three cryonics facilities. (The others are in Oakland, Calif., and Oak Park, Mich.)

After two straight years of 33 per cent growth, Alcor's sign-ups have risen to 353, and another 140 people have begun the process, says vice-president Ralph Whelan. Requests for Alcor's glossy 104-page information booklet trickle in at a rate of about 15 per day, compared to the rate six years ago of two per week.

You'd hardly guess any of this by looking at the place. The office backs up to a busy expressway in the middle of a small industrial park. Next door is Starving Students Movers, and just around the corner is Vern's Precision Form Grinding. An ambulance parked by the front door is emblazoned with Alcor's Phoenix-bird logo.

The "patient care bay" where the 10 bodies and 15 heads are stored is a glorified garage. Three three-metre-high stainless steel cylinders hold the bodies, while two steel-reinforced concrete vaults hold the heads. A red-lettered sign, labelled BIOHAZARD, warns of the AIDS virus within. Three of the heads belonged to AIDS victims.

Most of the time there is little going on in the building unless a member has just died. Then the place becomes a blur of surgeons and technicians, working to flush out a body's bloodstream and pump chemicals into the system that will help remove moisture from the body (in order to minimize the cell damage done by ice). And, as any cryonist will tell you, the quicker you can get a body into the deep freeze, the better the chances for good preservation.

After 24 hours at room temperature a dead body might as well be buried as frozen, some cryonicists admit. But everybody gets frozen anyway, optimum conditions or not, and the people who sign up for freezing wouldn't want it any other way.

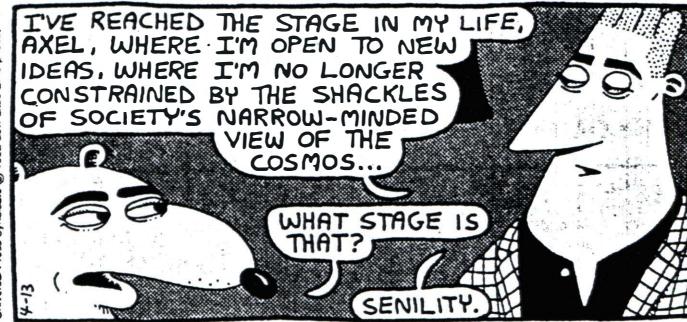

"Most of the people want to be suspended regardless," says Robert Ettinger, a Michigan physics instructor known as the "Father of Cryonics" for his 1964 book on the subject. "In other words, 'If you can find me, freeze me.'"

The greatest fear is being lost, whether vanished beneath the waves or incinerated by fire. Then there's the bogeyman of autopsy. "It is standard procedure in autopsy to remove the brain in sections, and of course that's not good," Whelan explained. "So we go into high-gear negotiating mode and work hard to get a non-invasive autopsy."

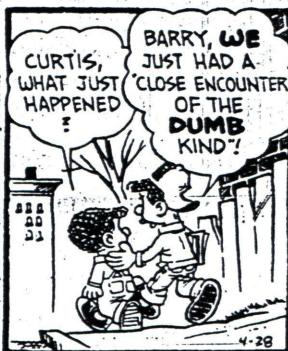

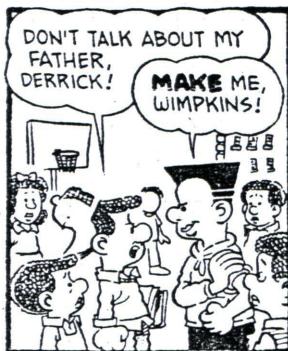

Once frozen, maintenance is simply a matter of topping off storage tanks with liquid nitrogen, a 30-cents-per-litre commodity that boils off from each container at a rate of about 11 litres per day." KW RECORD

SCOTTISH UFOLOGY. AND NEW HORIZONS,

BY MALCOLM ROBINSON SPI.

It was 7.20pm on the evening of October 27th 1992 as the Forsyth family car was travelling on a short journey to Stirling from Denny. Patrick Forsyth had made this journey many times before and his two young sons Barry (11) and David (6) sit quietly in the back discussing the school activities of a few hours earlier. It's dark, and the road is fairly quiet, suddenly a vision unfolds to Patrick, as he notices that up ahead, a strange aerial device is hovering motionless above the surface of the road.

"This is strange" he thinks to himself, "what on earth's going on here" ? Not wanting to alarm his two young sons, he says nothing at this point hoping that whatever it is, it will have gone away by the time he reaches it in his car. However, his fear remains, for as he drives ever closer to this object, he observes that whatever it is, it's certainly not going to move, he also observes, that this object does not conform to any aircraft or helicopter that he has ever seen before.

Seconds later, and Patrick finds himself only a few yards from the object, he calls out to his sons in the back now accepting that whatever the object is, it isn't going to go away, "boys, can you see this" ? "yes", they replied in unison, "what is it" ? Before Patrick could give an answer, this black 2 tiered object with small green lights moving around its underside, was obscured by a sudden and instant "fog bank", or what at least "appeared" to be a "fog bank" which stretched from one side of the road to the other.

Patrick quickly applied the brakes and slew the car through this rectangular "fog bank" which was not puffy or misty like fog, but rather as if one had placed a large sheet of white cardboard across the surface of the road. As he ground to a halt, he noticed another car up front which had been further up the road during his approach to this object, almost crash into the side of the road as it too went through this "instant fog bank".

Thankfully Patrick and his two sons were safe. He quickly looked up into the dark night sky and observed that this strange wingless object was gone. His son Barry, said that he looked out of the rear window and saw the object shooting across the sky at an incredible rate in the direction of Grangemouth a town a few miles to the west.

This was but one, in an incredible series of UFO sightings in and around the town of Bonnybridge in Stirlingshire Central Scotland, that SPI, (Strange Phenomena Investigations), Investigated, begining during the month of November 1992 to September 1993, (indeed, the sightings are still ongoing albeit to a smaller degree). Ever since the famous Livingston Incident of November 9th 1979, Scotland has seen a steady increase in UFO sightings. Prior to the Livingston Incident, which I'll relate shortly, I Investigated a huge wave of UFO sightings in and around the town of Moffat in the region of Dumfries and Galloway back in 1980-81.

Many strange aerial devices were reported in this region by many different people. A multiple witness case with photographs emerged which to this day, has never been satisfactorily explained, although a colleague of mine, a Mr Steuart Campbell, seems to think that the object caught by the camera, (a grey shaped object moving slowly in the sky), was in fact a mirage of a distant mountain top, a view I certainly don't concur with.

A repeater witness, (one who claims to see UFOs regularly), a Mrs Joyce Byres, discussed with me of her many night time observations of small silver ball shaped objects seen in the sky, which would make incredible manoeuvres as they swooped down from the sky towards the ground. Some of Joyce's more alarming UFO sightings were of one particular object which she fondly called, "Big Bertha". A large oval shaped object which featured a structured appendage attached to its rear, which when seen, made a noise similar in sound to a waterfall.

Some night's she sat for hours watching from her bedroom window as this strange aerial show unfolded before her eyes. Joyce wasn't alone in her

UFO observations, as many other people attested to her sightings. Although as is usual, some UFO sightings turned out to have natural explanations. However this particular region, Dumfries and Galloway, did at that point in time, see quite a lot of UFO activity, which for the moment at least, has appeared to have died down.

In 1982, I was again on the trail of UFOs this time in another what we UFOlogists call, "window areas", that is an area which receives a high concentration of UFO reports. This time the locality was Central Scotland, Denny to be precise. Little did I know it then, but ten years later I would be back in this region conducting similar research. I spoke to another repeater witness, a Mrs Elsie Beveridge who claimed to have been observing UFOs on and off for roughly 18 months. Mrs Beveridge a pleasant charming woman in her late forties, was not prone I believed, to making up tall stories, rather she related in her own way, her sightings of unusual shapes seen in the sky. Shapes that have also been seen by her husband and daughter.

I learned that the first time Elsie had observed anything unusual in the sky, was back in 1971 in Glasgow. Mrs Beveridge and her daughter observed a silver domed shaped object which had been stationary for a matter of a few minutes, shoot suddenly up into the sky at an alarming rate. It wasn't until Elsie moved to Denny, a good while after staying in Glasgow, that she began to see UFOs more regularly. So regularly, that in fact she kept a diary to document them all. Elsie told me, "I've seen dozens of strange craft in the skies, they range from domed shape to cigar shape. They have varied in size, and some have had coloured lights on them. They can move very fast, or else just hover completely stationary as if they were watching or listening ?"

Why do some people see UFOs more than other people ? This has been a major talking point in UFO circles for a number of years now and many theories have been put forward. One such theory, and perhaps one in which I myself would tend to favour, is that certain UFO witnesses are, after researching their claims and discussing their experiences, are generally found to be psychic, and that it is suggested that they may therefore see images that are lost to our own viewing spectrum. They may in certain conditions, get a glimpse into a different reality to view objects operating on a different wavelength. Speculation sure, but something we should at least consider. The Denny UFO window area was interesting and little did I know it then, that I would be back ten years later researching the same area all over again, this time with different witnesses.

Of course the biggest event ever to have occurred in UFOlogical terms in Scotland, was, what's been termed as the "Livingston Incident" of which so much has been written about, and as such I will only give the briefest of details here.

On the morning of November the 9th 1979, forestry worker Robert Taylor entered Dalmont Woods near Livingston, (Central Scotland) accompanied by his Irish red setter dog. Robert worked for the Livingston Forestry Department and was checking that no sheep or cattle had strayed into the woods. It was whilst doing this, that he encountered what he described as a "spaceship" resting just above the grass. As he stood transfixed at this amazing scene, 2 small, and what resembled second world war sea mines, rushed out from below this larger object and raced towards him. One of these small spheres extended its rod like extension onto his trousers, pulling him forcibly in the direction of this large round object with a flange going around its perimeter.

At this point the shock was too much for Robert, and he passed out, but before he did so, he told me in an interview a few days later, that he remembered a "swishing sound" like if one thrust a cane through the air. He also remembers a terrible acrid smell, of which he likened to burning car brake linings. Robert eventually regained consciousness, in which he then observed that the large object and two smaller objects were gone, leaving many impressions in the grass. He then found that he had a terrific thirst and pounding headache. Robert eventually managed to stagger home and told his wife of his strange encounter in the woods. A short while later, the British UFO Research Association, along with Strange Phenomena Investigations, became involved, and the rest as they say, is history.

We at SPI still have in our possession, the actual trousers that Robert wore on that eventful day, (which were on display at a UFO museum in London in July 1993). SPI felt that this major case, the biggest in the annals of Scottish UFOlogy, deserved to be publicly recognised, and to this end we commemorated it, with the assistance of the Livingston Development Corporation who erected a cairn with worded plaque at the site of this important event in May 1992. A commemoration of a UFO sighting has never been done anywhere else in the world, and SPI are the first research group to commemorate such an event.

We decided to commemorate it purely to draw attention to how serious the UFO enigma is, (where ever the true conclusion lies !) And in doing so, we hope that we have drawn attention to the complex subject of UFO sightings and their effects on the watching witness.

Since 1979, I have researched a number of UFO reports within Scotland, too many to go into in this short article. Some cases that stick in my mind are the following. We hypnotically regressed a Glasgow man due to his constant fears of "alien intrusion" into his life. He lost his wife and job through the pressure of his experiences of UFOs and aliens. Under regression, he recounted being on board a UFO which he found himself lying rigidly fixed to a raised bed like table in a circular room devoid of any furnishings/equipment of any kind. In front of him was a huge T.V. like screen which was showing pictures of planet Earth from space, with huge mushroom type explosions rising up from its surface. He then recollects of being terrified of huge slanted staring "yellow eyes". He remembers very little else about this episode, and in our last meeting, still told of being troubled by these recollections.

Another area which seems to attract strange lights in the sky, is near the village of Muchalls which lies inbetween the towns of Stonehaven and Aberdeen on the North-Easterly side of Scotland. Tom Allen, the principle witness regarding these sightings, tells of viewing strange lights in the sky stretching back to when he was a boy growing up in the area. Now this area does see a fair bit of air traffic, particularly helicopters due to their excursions over the North Sea to ferry personnel to and from the oil rigs. But the UFOs that Tom has witnessed, (he assures us), are not helicopters or aircraft. Tom has actually filmed on video, these strange lights, some of which, it must be said, are similar to those lights/UFOs, seen in the video "Messengers Of Destiny" which details UFO sightings over Mexico City. SPI are still currently working on the Muchalls UFO sightings, and we hope to continue filming these objects, which will hopefully provide an answer, or at least go towards providing some form of conclusion as to what exactly these balls of light are. Paul Devereux's "Earth Lights" maybe? Something akin to those mysterious lights seen in Hessdalen in Norway, who knows.

This brings me to the wave of UFO sightings around the town of Bonnybridge near Falkirk Central Scotland which more or less started in November 1992 when many locals observed strange balls of light and "structured objects" in the sky above their town. A local councillor, Billy Buchanan, collected these early reports whereby soon after I became involved. Both Billy and I soon realised that here in Bonnybridge something truly unusual was going on. After being featured in the local press, I was swamped by people telephoning me to relate their own personal UFO experience. Beginning our research, we soon uncovered the fact that "some" of these UFO sightings had natural down to earth explanations, ie, aircraft etc, but this still left a high residue of unexplainable reports which demanded an answer. There clearly was a "case to be answered".

Close proximity UFO sightings were made, one witness claims to have seen a strange craft hovering above a field, (similar it must be said, to a UFO that repeater witness Joyce Byres of Moffat had seen some ten years previously !) The witness described the object as having the sound similar to that of a washing machine on its final spin, ( a fast humming sound). The object departed seconds later and was soon lost to view. Another witness had a large unidentified object pass above his car near Bonnybridge, which featured a "crucifix pattern of lights" on its underside. The sightings continued, and one family were terrorised on a lonely country road by a bright object which flew above their heads then landed in a nearby field.

The family, a mother daughter and son, took to their heels, and upon doing so, turned round to notice that the large ball of light which had landed in a nearby field, had now moved and positioned itself in the centre of the road. Further along the road, the family claim to have been "blinded" by a burst of brilliant light which shone forth from a group of trees. This particular sighting, has gained the most publicity when the media descended on Bonnybridge.

The sightings continued and were brought to the attention of one Junichi Yaoi a UFO researcher from Japan who produces UFO documentaries Junichi and his film crew visited Bonnybridge in May 1993 on a whistle stop tour of the worlds UFO "hotspots". He told SPI, "I have heard so much about these Bonnybridge UFOs from English researcher Tony Dodd, that we just had to come over and see for ourselves". Sadly they never saw anything themselves, but what they did do, was to interview several witnesses to the UFO phenomena around Bonnybridge. Junichi and his assistant Mitchi Nakamura, were clearly satisfied that "something" very peculiar was going on above the town of Bonnybridge.

Not since the Livingston Incident of 1979, has Scotland experienced such a public awareness of UFO sightings. The Scottish media was alive with UFO reports. Patrick Forsyth, whose account opened this article, will certainly never forget what he saw, the vision is still imprinted firmly upon his mind.

The UFO challenge is still with us, its like the proverbial carrot dangling in front of the donkey, we see something tangible, but are still trying to grasp what appears to be forever out of our reach. This UFO subject is as elusive as its ever been, and although it appears that there is different componants which could make up the full UFO picture, these componants are themselves not providing us with any clear cut clues. The E.T. hypothesis may be favoured in the U.S. but across the pond in the U.K. we see it differently.

Why have we not any cases of small grey "beings" being reported here,? a few yes, but nothing like the wealth of sightings reported from the U.S.

(SHEET EIGHT)

This UFO business is complex and is fraught with absurdities and we researchers are forever being kept on our toes as to what might happen next. Scotland, like anywhere else, has its UFO problem, we are no nearer a solution now, than we were 40 odd years ago.

The UFO phenomenon won't go away, neither will its Investigators, and until such times as we listen to one another, and share in one another's views, ideas, speculations, then perhaps we might begin to see some light at the end of the tunnel. But as it is right now, I personally believe that whatever the UFO phenomenon is, it's certainly not prepared to give up its secrets right now. The continuation of abduction reports cattle mutilations etc, seems pointless, and begs the answer, "Why". Why continue, aint you got enough genetic information ?

I've been researching this subject for only a short while now (around 15 years), and in that time the subject has become deeper and more complex. The UFOlogical zoo of different opinionated people which has at times dragged us through the quagmire, the new age UFOlogy, is becoming more and more like a religion to some who see it as a hollow to be filled in in their lives. The UFOs are our saviours, the "New Gods" if you like, (as Glasgow rock group sing about). All this has been said before, but I hope that when science finally wakes up to the UFO problem then, and only then, will we begin to see new horizons which may effectively lead us into a new understanding, of not only ourselves, but the universe around us, here's hoping anyway.
